M THE VILLAGE OF GORDES: A SOURCE OF INSPIRATION FOR SO MANY ARTISTS...

Thanks to its ingenious use of natural elements (troglodyte caves, decorative pebbles, waterways to drive the tanneries and spinning mills) the village flourished in the 18th and 19th centuries. But an earthquake in 1909 diverted the river from the bottom of the village and the local industries were no longer able to operate. After World War II and the increasing rural exodus, the village fell into disuse.

In the 50s and 60s, some greatest artists from Paris and all over Europe began to flock to the village to spend a few months each year, attracted by the light of the provencal region. One of the first to settle there was André Lhote, who invited many artistic friends to discover the charms of his village...including such luminaries as Marc Chagall, Jean Deyrolle and Willy Ronis. When he created his educational museum in the Castle in 1970, Victor Vasarely helped Optical Art gain worldwide recognition. From 1997 to 2011, the castle housed the Pol Mara museum, and still plays host to major exhibitions each summer.

Listed as a historic monument in 1931, its construction took place in stages between the 11th and 16th centuries. It belonged to the Agoult Simiane family, who ruled over Gordes for nearly 700 years, and turned the medieval building into an imposing Renaissance castle (1525). The original building (11th century) was modified and enlarged from the 12th to the 16th century. Its architecture combines medieval defensive art and Renaissance styles. Between 1971 and 1996, it housed the Museum of Victor Vasarely, then the works of Pol Mara from 1997 to 2011. Temporary exhibitions in season.

Accessible during guided tours and exhibitions.

FOUNTAIN ON PLACE GENTY PANTALY

The only village water source until 1956. It was reserved for drinking purposes. Washing clothes was restricted to the lower village in the Fontaine Basse district. Place Genty-Pantaly, once virtually walled off to the west, was the heart of the mediaeval village. It was named after a local cook from the early 20th century.

The bell-tower, built on the site of an old Romanesque church, served as a watchtower over the plain. Inside, in the chapel on the left as you enter, a picture depicts St Crespin and St Crespinien, the patron saint of cobblers, whose sizeable guild numbered up to a hundred members working in shoemaking in the 19th century. In the choir, there is a visible crack, due to the earthquake of June 1909.

THE CHAPLAINCY OF SAINT-JACOUES

Once a resting place for pilgrims on their way to Santiago de Compostela. However most of them passed through the Calavon valley along the Domitian Way linking Italy to Spain. Closed to the public.

THE PORTE DE SAVOIE

This door adjoining the chaplaincy was one of the main entrances to the village in the Middle Ages. Its porch is decorated with a bas-relief representing the Savoy coatofarms, commemorating the support lent by the Agoult Simiane family to Béatrice de Savoie, Countess of Forcalquier, during the mid-13th century conflict between her and her son-in-law, Charles d'Anjou.

6 THE WASH HOUSE

This area was the economic heart of the village until the 19th century thanks to the streams which flowed at the time, with its tanneries, silk mills, artisans, merchants and cafés. To your left in the rock, note the traces of an old wine vat in which the grapes were trampled to make wine, and the cubic and rectilinear niches where racks were kept for the silkworms bred in the 19th century.

7 THE CELLARS OF THE PALAIS SAINT-FIRMIN

Life underground was a significant factor in Gordes. Every multi-storey house in the village had troglodytic cellars on several levels underneath its foundations, where craftsmen and farmers did their work. The work now being undertaken under the cellars of St Firmin gives us a glimpse into this extraordinary aspect of local life, which lasted for centuries.
